

FIND THE GOLDEN FLEECE:

Jason and the Argonauts were on a quest for the Golden Fleece.

Find the Golden Fleece in this room

BORE ARGUS TO DEATH

Argus was Hera's hundred-eyed watchman, who never closed all of his eyes when he slept. Hermes got him to close his eyes eternally by telling him a dull and boring story.

Bore Argus to death by telling him a story until all his open eyes are closed.

DISCUS THROWING

Discus throwing was one of the sports in ancient Greece and was prominent in the Olympic games.

Try to throw a discus into the bucket, take as many tries as you need

THE LABYRINTH

The inventor Daedalus built a labyrinth for king of Crete. In the center of the labyrinth the Minotaur, was kept, half man and half bull, which ate people.

Use the maze to get 1 ball into the center

SING TO DAPHNE

Apollo, the god of light, reason and music, fell hopelessly in love with the nymph Daphne. The god of love Eros (Cupid) made sure she never returned Apollo's love.

Sing a love song to Daphne

OPEN PANDORA'S BOX

Pandora was the first mortal woman. Zeus had had made her insatiably curious. He gave her a box, which he told her never to open. When she finally could not resist anymore, a horde of miseries came out: Greed Vanity, Slander, Envy, and other evils.

SHOOT EROS' ARROWS

Eros (Cupid, in Roman) was the son of Aphrodite, goddess of love and beauty, when he shot an arrow in somebody's heart he or she would fall in love with the first person whom he or she met.

Shoot an arrow on the heart.
Try as many times as you need.

ACHILLES' HEEL

When Achilles, the greatest warrior of Greece, was born His mom held him by his heel above a sacred fire to make him immortal. Instead of immortal it made invulnerable, except for his heel.

Jump to the playroom and back on one foot, holding your heel.

FOLLOW ARIADNE'S THREAD

Ariadne helped Theseus come back safely out of the labyrinth by giving him a ball of thread which led him to the Minotaur and back.

Take the ball of thread and carefully find your way to the Minotaur by disentangling it.

BLIND LIKE OEDIPUS

Oedipus, king of Thebes, who unknowingly married his mother and killed his father, blinded himself.

You will be blindfolded. Figure out who in the room is put before you by touching his face, clothes etc.

IT TAKES TWO TO CENTAUR

Centaur were half horses and half men, cunning and savage, who did not honor any of the gods. One centaur, however, was kind and wise and taught many heroes.

Choose a partner from your team and pretend to be a centaur.

THE GRAY SISTERS' EYE

The Gray sisters were three sisters, born old, with grey hair, who shared one eye.

Throw the eye in the cup. Take as many times as you need.